Daily Report

We continued our tour of Washington DC today, and then traveled to Baltimore to watch the Orioles and Minnesota Twins play baseball at Camden Yard Stadium. The highlights of our day are listed below:

- A bit more sleep this morning, as we began our day at 7:30 am, instead of earlier (can you believe your scouts are waking up so early - and generally not complaining?).
- Visit to 700 Pennsylvania Avenue for photo opportunities on the front side of the White House.
- Walk to the National Archive to see the "Three Charters of Freedom": Declaration of Independence; Constitution; and Bill of Rights (no inside pictures allowed - sorry).
- Bus trip to the Steven F Udvar-Hazy Air & Space Museum Extension - we saw the Space Shuttle Enterprise, Enola Gay Bomber, and a hundred other planes/rockets.
- Went to the baseball game, which the Orioles were losing 7 to 2 in the seventh inning when we left to return to Washington.
- While at the game, we enjoyed seeing Josh become famous on the Stadium Jumbo-tron, doing a dance to the mid-inning music with other scouts.

It was another excellent day, and it has been fun to observe the scouts as they demonstrate leadership and friendship with one another. The scout masters feel fortunate to be working with this great group of boys, who live up to the principles of the Scout Oath and Law. We thank the parents for being their first great teachers; you can be proud of your sons.

Good night!
